"This Month In History"

OCTOBER

1925: The National Life and Accident Insurance Company introduces its own radio station, WSM. A little over a month later, the station airs the Barn Dance program, and the Grand Ole Opry is born.

1945: The United Nations is established to maintain international peace and security. The UN took the place of the League of Nations after World War II, going into effect on Oct. 24.

1957: The Brooklyn Dodgers announce that the team is moving to Los Angeles. Although this left many New Yorkers with broken hearts, the move brought the MLB to the Pacific Coast for the first time.

1968: NASA's Apollo 7 launches humans into space. It was the agency's first manned flight in over a year.

1975: "Live from New York, it's Saturday Night!" George Carlin hosts the first episode of "NBC's Saturday Night." Still on air, the sketch comedy show is now known as "Saturday Night Live" or simply "SNL."

1989: Wayne Gretzky becomes the all-time leading point scorer in the NHL. Surpassing Gordie Howe on Oct. 15, Gretzky still holds this record today with 2,857 points.

1993: Beloved novelist Toni Morrison wins the Nobel Prize in Literature. Receiving the prize for her "visionary force and poetic import," she was the first Black woman to earn this honor.

2014: The podcast boom begins with the debut of "Serial." After only a month, the true-crime series had been downloaded and streamed a record 5 million times.
